Holiday magic is on the way!

It's Saturday morning, Nov. 29. You need a break! You've been cooking, cleaning, and caring for family and guests since last Wednesday night. Thursday was the Big Meal. Friday you went shopping for deals. and ate leftovers for dinner.

By Saturday morning, you need a break! Pack up the kiddos and head over to Whitepine Grange for a hearty biscuits and gravy breakfast, and then sit them all down with Santa in our professional photo studio and have pictures taken for your Christmas letters.

No Grinches are allowed here! This event is all about making warm, magical memories that will last a lifetime.

Since this is also a fundraiser to help pay for Whitepine Grange's kitchen renovation, we ask a $10 donation from adults

Photos will be emailed to you that day.

Breakfast is served from 9am to 11:30am, and Santa will be on hand from 9:30 to noon. See you Saturday morning, Nov. 29! Let the magic begin!

Gingerbread House Contest for Kids!

Whitepine Grange is holding its second annual "Gingerbread House Contest" for kids 4 to 12 years old on Sat., Dec. 13, from noon to 2pm.

Each child will be given a gingerbread house kit, complete with decorations and frosting. The kids supply the creativity! Prizes will be given in two age groups for the best houses.

This event is FREE, sponsored by Blackfoot Communications and Whitepine Grange. Pre-registration is absolutely necessary, as we have kits for just 20 children. Adults must accompany contestants.

To reserve a spot, call the Grange at 406-827-0102 and leave a message. We will call back the week of the event to confirm your child's reservation.

Christmas before the Grinch

By Jan Manning, Whitepine Grange president

I despise the Grinch.

As a Baby Boomer, I was spared the atrocities of this ugly green monster and its role in ruining an otherwise cozy, magical spirit of Christmas. To this day, I shudder when I see these green things representing a major role in modern Christmas scenes. Hobby Lobby has several aisles of seasonal décor solely devoted to Grinch. Sorry, I don't get it.

My childhood Christmases were colored red and evergreen, with large sprinklings of Minnesota snow. Santa was up there in status with the babe in the manger. Both were symbols of love and gentleness that defined the magical season. The sounds of Christmas were Gene Autry singing "Rudolph" and the Tabernacle Choir singing the "Hallelujah Chorus." During the day on Dec. 24, I'd accompany my dad, a match company executive, as he drove around town to his friends' homes, delivering bottles of "Christmas cheer." In return, the recipients would give him another bottle, box of candy, or a jar of pickled herring (his favorite). By the time we returned, my maternal grandparents would have arrived from the Twin Cities, weighed down with presents for all of us.

Ugh. Those flocked trees of 1964!

Christmas Eve was a dinner of sweet treats, followed by the opening of gifts, followed by a trip to the Lutheran church for a candlelight service while my Catholic grandparents stayed home to watch the Pope and Midnight Mass on TV. On Christmas morning, my siblings and I raced downstairs to see what Santa had put in our stockings. My most memorable gift: a pair of my very own water skis. At age 14 then, I was too big for Santa and the skis were too big for a stocking, but I was thrilled just the same.

The aromas of Christmas were French meat pie, shortbread and almond cookies, and lutefisk from my Norwegian grandma's kitchen.

The feeling of Christmas was one of exquisite warmth, safety, excitement and comfort. It started in mid-December with school programs and church choir concerts, climaxed Christmas Eve, and promptly experienced denouement after Christmas Day breakfast. Christmas was four-dimensional magic.

As a newlywed, I tried to recreate those feelings with the same traditions, but it didn't work. Over the past 40 years, my husband and I have formed and re-formed our own traditions, with little resemblance to what we experienced as children. Yet the magical feeling still overwhelms me when I hear Handel's Messiah or smell almond cookies (or even lutefisk!) I'm instantly transported to a time of harmony, security, and pure joy.

I wonder about today's families, living in such different times. How will the kiddos of today define Christmas memories 60 years from now? Will the Grinch be more important than Santa? Will Mariah Carey's "All I Want for Christmas" drown out Bing's "White Christmas"? (I guess it already has.) Will "Ugly Sweater" parties replace Christmas concerts and caroling? Will sweatpants and t-shirts replace green velvet dresses and red velvet bows for little girls' Christmas eve attire? Again, I guess that's already happened. I just hope that somewhere in this hodgepodge of morphed traditions, the MAGIC that was Christmas "back then" remains as potent and heartwarming for today's youngsters. As adults, it's our responsibility to pass the everlasting spirit of Christmas on to younger generations. Make Christmas a magical time again. Make it mean something other than electronic gifts and gift cards. Teach your children that the true joy of Christmas is giving, so that at least once a year we can all feel warm and fuzzy—together.

Merry Christmas from all of us at Whitepine Grange, whatever your religious beliefs might be. Enjoy "peace at home and good will toward men," and then challenge yourself to keep that feeling all year long.

Pass on the magic . . .

Grange members brighten Christmas for local family in a rough patch

Once again this year, Whitepine Grange members have stepped up to help a local family in need.

The family, which remains anonymous to us, was chosen by Sanders County Coalition for Families. SCCF sent us a list of the family’s most immediate needs, along with a “wish list,” and Grange members had the pleasure of shopping for the gifts. Basic needs included bedding, household items and gas cards.

Grange members participating in the project were Kerri Cobb, Ruth and Will Tucker, Percy Plante, Jim Bittinger, Shelle Knutson, Don and Jan Manning, Kate and Francois Comunetti, and Monte and Carolyn Nesbitt.

The Whitepine Grange project this year was funded by donations from the participants, along with a grant from Town Pump.

Between these sources, we were able to purchase everything on the family’s Christmas list.

Cardio Drumming: A new beat for Grange fitness classes

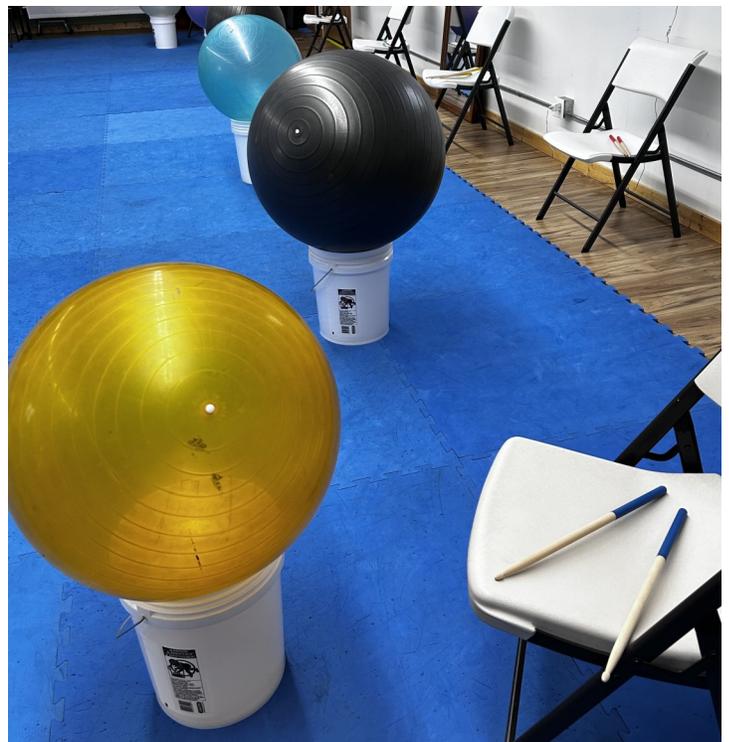

Professional drummers get a good workout while making their music! That's why we're introducing "cardio drumming" into our "Joy of Movement" fitness classes at the Grange on Mondays and Thursdays at 9am.

The drums, of course, are stability balls. The stands are 5-gallon buckets donated by Stud's Hardware in Thompson Falls. The music is mostly from the '60s to '90s.

Cardio drumming involves natural rhythm with a full body workout. It's just another addition to the fitness class' existing repertoire, which also includes cardio dancing, trampolines, step platforms and resistance bands.

Classes are free to Grange members and $5 to nonmembers. All proceeds go back to the Grange.

Show up at 9am sharp on Mondays and Thursdays and be ready for a full hour of nonstop exercising at your own pace. Bring sneakers and a water bottle! The music is great, and the "high" you get is better than any medicine on the market.
